After checking out new Italian eatery Tomato Pie Co. three weeks back, your Discreet Diner came across an old favourite just down the block.

It had been awhile since we filled up at Buccacino's, an upscale-yet-affordable bistro with a bulging menu. So we gathered some amici and famiglia for a night of pasta, parmesana and other Italian delights.

Occupying a relatively large space for an Osborne Village joint, Buccacino's is made up of smallish tables (for cuddling up to your loved ones) and even cozier booths, as well as a patio with a prime view for people-watching. Inside, warm neutrals colour the walls and bright paintings and sculptures create a relaxing atmosphere that's both chic and family friendly.

And if the decor doesn't get you in the mood, the menu will. Having too much to choose from is hardly worthy of complaint, but you'll need time to sift through the offerings at Buccacino's before you can decide.

Even at the start, we and our three dinner dates took awhile to decide on drinks. The wine menu boasts over 30 options, plus there's an extensive list of cocktails and liqueurs.

For starters, we shared the zucchini fritte, shrimp napoli and Italian garlic
